Chocolate is Good

OBVIOUSLY, YOU LOVE THE TASTE, but it's actually been found to have health benefits. So, in celebration of Valentine's Day - indulge yourself.

Of course, it's best to eat dark chocolate, but even milk chocolate contains a small amount of flavonoids, which are plant compounds with antioxidant properties. Cocoa beans contain large quantities of flavonoids, and so does red wine and tea. The flavonoids in chocolate are called flavonols - they prevent fat-like substances in the bloodstream from oxidizing and clogging the arteries, making blood platelets less likely to stick together and cause clots. □
